WEATHER

WEATHER SYNOPSIS BY REGION:

NORTHERN CALIFORNIA AND CENTRAL COASTAL AREAS:

Eureka Weather:

A cold front will bring widespread rain to northwest California into Monday. This front will also cause gusty mountain winds. A post frontal trough will follow the cold front bringing a few strong showers and a possible thunderstorm which may contain small hail. Temperatures will cool Monday night as the clouds clear and cold air fills in behind this system. More rain is expected Tuesday night into Wednesday then again late in the week.

San Francisco Weather:

Dry weather with seasonable temperatures is expected both today and Wednesday. The next storm will bring a chance of rain to the North Bay Thursday. Another system will bring a good chance of rain to most of the district Friday or Saturday.

CENTRAL CALIFORNIA AND SOUTHERN SAN JOAQUIN VALLEY

Sacramento Weather:

Dry zonal flow will persist through Wednesday with some high clouds at times. An elongated frontal system impacts northern California with potential rain from Wednesday night into the weekend. Chances for the southern Sacramento Valley to receive precipitation increase Friday and Saturday. Significant rainfall is possible over the far northern sections of the state through Saturday.

Hanford Weather:

A cooling trend will occur today with breezy winds likely this morning across the west side of the San Joaquin Valley and the Kern county mountains and deserts. High pressure will return for the remainder of the week with dry conditions continuing and temperatures warming to above normal by Thursday. Another system will bring increased clouds along with a cooling trend by Saturday.

WEATHER

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA:

Los Angeles Weather:

Breezy and cooler weather is forecast for today. There will be plenty of North Slope clouds with a slight chance of shower. Temperatures will rise to above normal mid to late week as weak offshore flow develops cooler weather and a slight chance of Central Coast rain this weekend with the next low pressure system.

Extreme Southwestern California Including Orange, San Diego, Western Riverside and Southwestern San Bernardino Counties:

A trough of low pressure moving inland through the west today will maintain higher humidities with seasonal temperatures near the coast and slightly above average temperatures for inland areas. For Wednesday through Friday, high pressure to the south will expand northward bringing lower humidities for inland areas, a shallower marine layer, and warming with high temperatures 5 to 10 degrees above average. A trough of low pressure moving inland along the West Coast Saturday night and Sunday will bring cooling and a deeper marine layer with higher humidities followed by warming early next week.

Southeast California Weather:

Gradual drying will occur this week. Some warming is expected by midweek lasting through Saturday with highs 5-10 degrees above normal. A cool down is expected to take place on Sunday into early next week bringing temperatures back to near seasonal normals.
